

submission:

bureaucracy

Ever had trouble with bureaucracy? ... you're not alone.

Australia's entire bureaucracy is in a state of perpetual confusion because women and men are required to administer laws enacted solely by men's legislatures to which women are admitted, according* to the nation's Constitution, under male supervision.

The solution is the provision of a women's legislature.

9 October, 2009

philip mckeon

406/43 morehead street redfern eora
sydney australia 2016
ph +61(0)296980596
2mf.net

 power and control: rape and the Constitution (excerpt)

There is nothing in the black letter law of the Constitution of Australia to say that women should be prohibited from being elected to Parliament, yet women were prohibited from being elected to Australia's first Parliament.

Why? ... because that was the intention of the Westminster Parliament which enacted the Commonwealth of Australia Act 1900, a parliament which prohibited women.

The intention of those who enact legislation accompanies law.

Australia's Constitution has never been amended to overturn the intention men boss over women which accompanied its enactment.

The Westminster Parliament enacted men's legislatures only.

The Commonwealth Franchise Act 1902 allowed women to vote and to stand for Parliament but this did not overturn the intention men boss over women because legislation enacted under a Constitution cannot change its intention.

Australia's Constitution provides for a referendum to change intention.

What the Commonwealth Franchise Act 1902 did was extend male supervision of women to the nation's legislatures.

http://2mf.net/power_and_control:_rape_and_the_Constitution.htm